

EMFA 2022, 25 - 26 August, Dresden

General Information

Getting there:

Dresden has an (allegedly) international airport, but most connections from abroad will not be direct, but via other airports in Germany (mainly Munich, Frankfurt).

Dresden Airport has an "S-Bahn" station and a bus station. To get to the city centre the S-Bahn is a good and quick option, depending on the localisation of your accommodation. Tickets can be bought at a vending machine at the underground station (costs of a single fare €2,50 - in February 2022). A taxi would cost about €30,-.

Booking a flight to Berlin or Leipzig/Halle and traveling onward by train or rental car might be an option too. From Berlin, the trip to Dresden by train takes about 2, from Leipzig about 1 hour.

Choosing Your Accommodation:

On the map on page 2, both meeting venues are marked with red stars. The areas outlined in red are those with a lot of bars and restaurants with outdoor facilities. A lot of young people go out in this area. Although it is very nice to spend an evening there, it might be quite noisy during the night, so it may not be the best choice if you favour a quiet sleeping accommodation.

Further organizational details:

On Google Play / iOS you can download the free Dresden App for easier getting around.

